Canadian skier/BASE jumper skips the tow-lift queue by launching onto the slopes from a moving plane

Rory Bushfield likes nothing much more than flying his Cessna over the British Columbia mountains, chucking his skis out of the window and then BASE jumping from the wing to pick them up and glide down the slopes.

He calls his walks and dance moves on the Cessna the “best feeling ever”, and makes every day count. Bushfield’s followed that philosophy since the training death of his champion freeskiier wife, Sarah Burke, in 2012.

A group of Harley-Davidson bike riders based in California travel the USA pulling off sick tricks like this

In 2009, Buddy Suttle began posting clips of his Harley tricks on YouTube — and now as part of Unknown Industries, the group he co-founded, he gets to pull stunts for a living. His line of work comes with a certain level of pain — he's had 11 concussions, a spleen and kidney removed, broken legs and heaps of stitches — but nothing's going to stop him. "I've ridden motorcycles my whole life," he says. "It is my life."

Kirra, you're looking even hotter than you were in your last ZOO shoot, and that shouldn't be humanly possible. What's been happening?

I've just been working in my hairdressing business, and I'm about to open a new one in a week. I'll have one on the Gold Coast and one in Brisbane.

Want us to give it a plug in case any of the readers need to get their mullets trimmed?

Sure! It's Trendz Studio.

Do you ever think you should use some of your ZOO photos to make ads for the salon?

You know, with a block of text reading "This hottie will cut your hair!" You'd have more male customers than Carlton & United Breweries.

[Laughs] No, but I bought 10 copies of ZOO last time I was in it and I gave them to my clients, so they got to take one home.

Were they autographed?

Of course! They all wanted me to sign the front.

You probably could've sold them to those guys for $100 a pop. We've heard of some places that get the guys in by using hairdressers who work in bikinis. Ever thought of giving that a crack?

No, but there's a place near

Speaking of hair, we all know lots of women wax, shave and style their pubes. Do you think guys should tidy up a bit down there and take better care of their love moss?

Yeah, definitely! [Laughs] I used to get asked all the time by the most random people if we did manzilians. That's a male Brazilian wax. We just declined...

And called the police?

[Laughs] The people who were asking were the sort you'd call the police on, yeah! My beauty therapist once told me she did everything except male Brazilians. She used to do them, but she was waxing a man and she got to the most painful part — you always leave that leave till last — and when she ripped the wax off, he ejaculated on her!

Jesus wept, Kirra! We've heard some hardcore stuff from our models before, but nothing compares to that! The poor, poor woman.

Um... just out of interest, where is the most painful part?

It's just above the penis [laughs].

Last time you were in the mag you were doing a bit of pigging. How's that going?
I'm not doing it anymore. I'm retired. I like glamping now.

Ah, glamorous camping.

Yep. More than a day without showering and I get uncomfortable. Plus, I'm too busy with work.

You'll never make the cover of Bacon Busters now.

I know. Bummer! I was really hoping for that cover.

So how do you relax away from work? Nights out?

I still go out, but I mainly leave it for birthdays and hen's parties. I like watching movies and sleeping. You know, Netflix and chill.

That means sex now, doesn't it?

And that is exactly how I meant it!

Let's go back in time to when you used to have big nights.

Got a good story?

[Laughs] At Sin City the girls who work there wear lingerie. Me and my girls all wanted to join in, so we asked if we could wear what they were wearing and serve people behind the bar. We just wore what was under our clothes and they were alright with it!

Did you make an absolute killing in tips?

We got a few tips, actually. We've always joked that we came home with more money than we left home with. We used to just take money for pizza after we left the clubs. It'd be like, "How much are you taking?" "Oh, just $2." Hot girls don't know the prices of drinks.

135,000 HORSEPOWER!

The fastest car ever built

The makers of the Bloodhound SSC just revealed it in record-setting trim. Here's what makes it go...

MAKES F1 LOOK SILLY

The wheels are solid aluminium, weigh 95kg each and will spin at 10,200RPM during a land-speed record run. That's four times more than the wheels on an F1 car.

WHALE OF A TIME

Insane is a good way of describing the loads the suspension will have to deal with. The car itself weighs 7.5 tonnes, and when speed, downforce and deceleration are factored in, the set-up will have to support the weight of a humpback whale.

IT'S BIRD-PROOF

Yes, bird-proof. If a magpie hits the windscreen at about 1600kmh, it'll disintegrate, but the driver won't. The hardened canopy is as tough as what's on a fighter jet.

AS TOUGH AS IT IS FAST

Armoured panels that survived objects fired into them at 3200kmh are fitted, as stones might kick up and hit the body at high speed.

GET THE APP!

THREE ENGINES ARE BETTER THAN ONE

Those 135,000 horses come courtesy of a jet engine from an EJ200 typhoon fighter plane, and a Nammo rocket. The third engine, a 5.0-litre V8 from a Jaguar F-Type, runs the fuel pumps, which have to deliver 800 litres of juice during the rocket's 20-second burn time.

THRUST DO IT

The current land speed record is 1227.99kmh. The SSC is designed to hit 1690kmh. To make it get there the engines will produce 210,000 newton metres of thrust (an SS Commodore makes a bit over 500). That's more power than an entire F1 starting grid.

ELEPHANT IN DRAG

The SSC's air brakes are good for six tonnes of drag, about equal to a very well-fed African elephant. The parachutes are good for another nine tonnes.

MMA GOD Mark Hunt tells all!

His new biography Born to Fight pulls no punches about his streetfighting past. Here's proof...

SAVED FROM ANOTHER STINT IN JAIL

The police turned up on the scene, dragging these fellas off us. They put themselves between us and these fellas, some of whom we'd robbed earlier. The cops started asking questions, but of course no-one was answering. I'm guessing we were close to being given a stern talking-to and told to piss off, but that old anger started to burn hotter than reason or consequence could possibly cool.

I could still feel their kicks on me and see the foot scuffs on my clothes. What were they, these fellas, to me?

Soon it was mayhem out on the street. Johnno and I were into it, and the fellas on the other side, but also people who'd come from nowhere. It became one of those scraps no-one wanted to miss. The cops were trying to get a handle on the whole ruckus, but they realised they now needed back-up, and they were calling for it

"The fella was out before he even landed, falling under the wheels of the police car"

What gave them the right to put their boots into me? WHO THE FK ARE YOU?

While one of the cops was jibber-jabbering, I moved slowly towards one of the guys who'd been kicking me and I let fly with a big right hand. The fella was out before he even landed, falling under the wheels of the police car. Then I reloaded and dropped one of his mates, and then one more after that.

on their radios.

While the street was all flying fists and shouting, a hand reached over and pulled me back into the club. It was a dreadlocked guy, shorter and older than me, but strong, tattooed and with a definite confidence. This guy pushed me into the staff toilets and told me to stay there until he came and got me. I did what he said, and waited there for what felt like an hour. When the door opened, I knew this guy had probably just kept me from another stint in prison. "So, you like a scrap, do you son?" the man asked. I didn't say anything. "You want a real fight then?"

GET THE APP!

I did wonder what I'd been doing up to that point. The man said the words Muay Thai, but it didn't mean anything to me. He said the word "kickboxing", which I did understand. Then he said the word "Thursday". That man was Hunt's first serious trainer, Sam Marsters. Five days later, the huge Samoan was back in the club for his first non-streetfight...

HUNT'S FIRST KICKBOXING FIGHT

As time ticked past through the first round, I grew more and more confident. Fighting just one guy, on a flat surface, with no bins or curbs to fall over was actually pretty easy going.

When I came out for the second round I was ready to look for that spot where his chin would be open for business. With naked fists and often wildly swinging opponents, it was much easier to find that spot on the streets, but I was confident, with a little patience, that I'd get to this guy's spot. A scenario started playing in my mind. The ring was the same, but beyond it wasn't a nightclub, but a stadium — the MGM Grand Garden Arena. There were thousands of people and lights and cameras, and

I was stacked with muscles. I was darker skinned, too. I was Mike Tyson. My head had been playing a news clip I'd seen on TV of Mike Tyson knocking some poor fella out. It was clean, one-punch knockout, but which punch was it?

Then I saw it — a naked jaw and dropped hands. I threw a straight right at my opponent, landing it square on the jaw.

It was the same punch as the one I'd seen Iron Mike throw, and the results were the same. This dude was out cold. The crowd cheered and shouted, saying only good things, nice things.

"They need to put this kid in the movies," a woman yelled. A ripple of laughter followed. It felt good. It felt really good. I started dancing around the ring — we were in a nightclub, after all.

"Good shit, son," Sam said to me after the fight, handing me a six-pack. Those beers didn't last long.

"You know, I reckon we should probably do this again."

I reckoned he was right.

“Avengers made me a better dancer!”

Robert Downey Jr reveals his moustache secrets and the stupidest idea he's ever heard

G'day, Bob. If people didn't watch Avengers: Age of Ultron at the cinema, what are you hoping they make of the DVD?

I hope people say "Wow!" after they see this film! When you have a big movie like this, there are big expectations. This movie is incredibly fun and thoughtful: there's a bunch of new characters and it really raises the bar!

Is it surreal wandering around the set of The Avengers?

When I walked onto the set for the first time at the Avengers Tower I said, "Wow, this is really impressive." But walk around. We were basically working on a futuristic ice rink that was almost impossible to navigate. The floors looked beautiful, but they were so slippery it added an unforeseen amount of excitement and danger to walking. That said, I feel as though it made everyone much better dancers!

Are you a pretty smooth dancer?

I'm an OK dancer. I remember attending modern jazz classes in New York when I was a teen and instructors stopping the class and asking me if I wouldn't mind leaving. So I'm not sure how smooth I am...

Do you feel like you've become more like your

I'm starting to wonder who's playing who! I just have to keep telling myself that, ultimately, I'm real, and he's not. It's important for me to remember that!

We have to ask: how is it that Tony's facial hair is always perfect?

Great question! That all started with the first Iron Man movie and a guy named Pedro from a barber shop called The Shave of Beverly Hills in LA. This guy's an artist. He's like the Edward Scissorhands of moustaches and beards. Then, once you set a standard, it's all about upkeep

Yes, we have a Sherlock 3 in development right now. Hopefully it'll be the best of the series, but as you can imagine, that's also a pretty tall order!

Have you seen Benedict

Cumberbatch's take on Sherlock?

Oh yeah, I've been very impressed with Benedict. There's such smart writing on that show.

I get total screen envy when I watch it.

How do you relax?

Are you a gamer?

I have enough trouble getting online as it is. I wish I was a gamer because it seems like then, as we went along, somehow it wasn't factored in what would happen when all of the candy glass from the action sequences got ground into the floor...

So what happened?

It became very difficult to Tony Stark persona?

I always thought he was so cool when I read the comic books — and when we made the first Iron Man we were essentially wrapping that character around a cooler version of me. As we've gone along, and modulating it. It tends to be a lot of work. Is that the only thing you have to do to prep for the Marvel films?

I'll try to do as much strength training as I can, but that's mainly so I don't look like a scrawny Olive Oyl [from Popeye] next to the other studs.

Moving on, will we see a third Sherlock film?

those guys have a lot of fun.

We loved you in Tropic Thunder. Any plans for more comedies soon?

I remember reading the script for that and thinking, "This is the stupidest idea I've ever heard," and Ben Stiller was just like, "Yeah, I know, isn't it great?" It was just so wrong and outrageous that it was forgivable. But more comedies? You never know...

Fast food mash-up monstrosities!

They'll take five years off your life expectancy but it'll be totally worth it

Recently the good people at Burger King asked McDonald's if they'd be keen to combine and make a one-off burger called the McWhopper to mark Peace Day in the United States. The result would've been part Big Mac, part Whopper, but Ronald McDonald shut the idea down. No dice.

It was a tragic result, but it got ZOO thinking: Now we finally have an excuse to use the company's money to buy a shitload of junk food and combine it in ways so evil that even the contestants on The Biggest Loser would back away from the table.

So that's exactly what we did. Call a heart surgeon!

DOUBLE DOWN CHEESEBURGER

INGREDIENTS: Zinger patties as the buns — riffing on KFC's legendary Double Down creation — with an entire Macca's cheeseburger used for the filling.

TASTES LIKE: There's little in the fast-food world that can't be improved with more chicken and cheese, as this invention proves. Note: May prove fatal if eaten daily.

THE McWHOPPER

INGREDIENTS: Six parts Big Mac — top bun, all-beef patty, cheese, lettuce, special sauce, middle bun. Six parts Whopper — tomato, onion, ketchup, pickles, flame-grilled patty, bottom bun. TASTES LIKE: There's more meat in it than a Mardi Gras man-train, so reinforce your loo for the aftermath. The sauce combo is godly.

AUSSIE POUTINE

INGREDIENTS:

We head to Canada for poutine, the inspiration for this dish and what all the pissheads eat after a night on the grog: chips and gravy. Here we have Macca's fries and chicken McBites, with KFC gravy.

TASTES LIKE: Traditionalists may scoff at the lack of cheese curds, but think of this as an Aussie fusion dish. Delicious.

REEF, BEEF 'N' TWEET

INGREDIENTS:

A triple treat of protein in this instant classic: top deck a Filet o'fish, the middle a KFC original burger and then a Whopper. Taste sensation!

TASTES LIKE: Close your eyes and it's like a trip from the coast to the outback. First that smell of the sea with a gourmet sauce, then the sizzle of prime beef. May put you in a coma for a few hours.

HUNGRY MACCA'S PIZZA

INGREDIENTS:

Take a pizza base — your favourite topping, this menu doesn't discriminate — and top with Macca's fries and onion rings from Hungry Jacks. Eat.

TASTES LIKE: This is virtually a complete meal, with veggies, carbs and protein. If you listen carefully you can feel the extra fat settling on your bones.

DOUBLE WHOPPER POUNDER

INGREDIENTS: All-beef patty, pickles, onions, ketchup, mustard on a sesame seed bun from a Quarter Pounder in a Hungry Jack's Double Whopper.

TASTES LIKE: Meat, with extra meat, carbo-loading for gym-goers and the occasional salad. Enough calories for about a week. Walk it off!

ARTERY ASSAULT!

PIZZA STACK

INGREDIENTS:

For fans of the above pizza, build a tower of taste, alternating the onion rings and the fries. You could add mayo/ketchup for filling!

TASTES LIKE: You'd better hope your teeth are strong, as there's plenty of crunch in this creation. Overall flavour is high, given the amount of fat and salt present.

AIMING FOR 2018
PARALYMPICS!

NO LEGS? No worries!

Stunner doesn't let her lack of limbs get in the way of her lingerie modelling

Inspirational athlete
Kanya Sesser has gone from being abandoned on the steps of a Buddhist temple in Thailand to modelling lingerie and training for the 2018 Winter Paralympics.

Sesser, who was born without legs, earns more than $1000 a day by looking hot and proving to people that "different" is beautiful.

"I was mainly doing athletics shoots then as I got older I got into lingerie modelling," the LA-based 23-year-old told the NY Daily News.

"It's something fun and it shows my story — I'm different and that is sexy, I don't need legs to feel sexy. I enjoy making money from it and I love showing people what beauty can look like. These images show my strength."

Sesser was adopted by an American couple at age five. Her GoFundMe page — she's raising money for a mono-ski to aid her Paralympics preparation — says, "[Her parents] describe her as a very independent girl and don't like it when people try to help her. She doesn't see herself as being disabled in any way."

She lives by her Facebook motto "No legs, no limits", with her sporting passions including track, mono-skiing, skateboarding — how she gets around instead of a wheelchair — basketball, tennis and water skiing.

Sesser also combines

"I DON'T NEED LEGS TO FEEL SEXY"

modelling with public speaking aimed at motivating kids with disabilities to get into sports, and she has a business degree.

She rejects criticism of her modelling career. "It just happened for me and I got used to it. I like expressing myself in a different way than people usually see.

"I'm very honest, I'm real — I'm never going to behave different to anyone. This is just who I am."

THE HOTTEST NEW WHEELS EVERY WEEK

From $400 to $1.5 million in just 22,000 hours!

Blocke turns shitbox into show-stopper because he had nothing better to do. Your turn next

When Canadian mechanic JF Launier first saw this car, it was a rusty 1964 Buick Riviera someone had thrown out. After six years, 22,000 hours of work and US$300,000 in spare parts, the result has just won the Ridler Award for most creative and innovative custom car in America. And US$10,000, so Launier's only a bit out.

He estimates the value at US$1.5m from the hours he's put into the job, which may not be how it works. It's got a 635kW 6.2L Chevy V8 under the hood, with 1960s-style chocolate brown leather interiors, a modded body with 1970s Buick touches and a "school bus yellow" paint job that's the exact opposite of ninja.

CHRIS BROWN: GOOD RIDDANCE TO WOMAN-BEATING RUBBISH

Remember way back in 2009 when Rihanna was with Chris Brown and she should've ducked instead of getting a weave? Well, it's come back to bite Brown on the dick, as he's just been refused entry into Australia for having a domestic violence record.

The ruling from our government won't stop Chris Brown from going worldwide and collecting thousands of hoop earrings and STIs, but the message to the wider community is this: if you're a man who gathers AVOs and restraining orders, you're weaker than Chris Brown's music and I hope you share a jail cell with some bloke who makes you feel like you're the only girl in the world.

This ruling was announced the day before his tickets were due to go on sale, and that footage of the Freo Dockers fan punching that woman in the stands could easily have been mistaken for part of a viral marketing campaign for his tour. Not sad it's all gone to waste...

Chris Brown fans were obviously looking forward to paying top dollar to see his amazing lip-syncing, so they've jumped to his defence by mentioning how long ago his conviction was and stressing that "he's changed". This isn't about whether he's changed, folks. We have a huge problem with domestic violence in Australia and this is a clear message to all those other men who think it's OK to dish out some violence every now and then.  Mario's moustache is a slightly different colour from his hair, possibly because he does heaps of coke, or because it's false.

 Atari is named for the Japanese word for "success" or "hit the target".

 There's a ban on Nazi symbols being published in Germany, so the swastika on the back cover of Medal of Honor: Frontline led to a swift reprint — with the designers also removing Nazi flags and other related Third Reich memorabilia.

 Possessing the game Manhunt in New Zealand is a criminal offence.

 Famous people who love gaming include Jack Black, Megan Fox, Mila Kunis, Kobe Bryant, Olivia Munn, Lil Wayne, Seth Rogen and Vin Diesel.

 The button-mashing games controller world record of 16 hits per second was set by Toshuyuki Takahashi, a Japanese gamer who got his own video game series as a result.

 The development team for Forza Motorsport 2 got into the spirit of things, getting 41 speeding tickets and two licence revocations while making the game.

 Rockstar Games paid a PR guru to give Grand Theft Auto negative press in order to raise its profile.

 The creators of Dragon's Lair used Playboy magazines to model the princess's looks.

 Scientists had spent 15 years trying to untangle the structure of the HIV virus, but a massive group effort on the online video game Foldit saw the puzzle solved within just 10 days.

 When Tomohiro Nishikado created Space Invaders, he discovered that the processor lag reduced greatly with fewer Invaders on the screen. Rather than compensate, he left it as is, potentially inventing incremental difficulty in video games.

 Lara Croft's big rack came about 'cos designer Toby Gard accidentally adjusted the model's chest to 150 per cent its intended size. Other Tomb Raider designers convinced him the huge bazoogas should stay.

 The US Air Force bought 2200 PlayStation 3s in 2009 to use as part of a supercomputer military research program.

 In 2000 there were reports that the PS2 graphics chip was powerful enough to be used to guide missiles to their targets.

 FIFA 2001 is one of only a few games to use a scratch-and-sniff CD. The disc smelt of turf.

 Even pensioners rock at games. John Bates, then 85, holds the world record for most perfect 300 tenpin-bowling games in Wii Sports with 14,000.

 In June 2012, a Reddit user reported he'd been playing a game of Civilisation II for 10 years, now thousands of years in the future. Spoiler: it's looking grim for humanity.

 In the original Donkey Kong arcade game Mario was a carpenter called, fittingly, Jumpman.

 Reports in 2013 said a Chinese man hired multiple cyber-assassins to kill his jobless son's WoW avatar.

 There are 17.75 million guns available in Borderlands, the most of any game.

50 BIZARRE VIDEO GAMES FACTS!

 In 2000's Deus Ex, the World Trade Center towers were missing from the skyline, causing a lot of complaints. Designer Harvey Smith explained the spookiness this way: "When people complained, we just explained that it had been destroyed by terrorist attacks. We start the game with the Liberty Island statue having been destroyed by terrorists a few years before. We just said that the towers had been destroyed too. And this was way before 9-11."

 Mortal Kombat II arcade machines attracted so many rabid fans that some units had to have deadlock security panels fitted. Why? Light-fingered gamers were ripping the electronic guts from the machine and taking it away with them.

 Find the monkey people on the first playable level of Halo 3 — the feature's an early Easter egg, just look a little harder.

 The multiplayer mode from Goldeneye that became a gamer favourite was an afterthought that was tacked on in the last six weeks of the game's development.

 Iron Maiden lead singer Bruce Dickinson was part of the team that set a world record for the longest simulated flight in a video game in 2007, flying 64,000km in seven days.

 In 2011, a 46-year-old man from Plymouth, England, found and attacked a 13-year-old kid because the young boy had killed him too many times in Call of Duty.

 The phrase "it's on like Donkey Kong" was actually trademarked by Nintendo in 2010.

 In 2002 a man was jailed for four months for playing Tetris on a plane. The Guinness Book lists the sentence as a world record.

 Check out those pizza boxes in Hitman 2: Silent Assassin. The language is Danish, meaning "real pizza with shit on it".

 Eve Online suffered its own global financial crisis when the founder of an in-game bank quite legally stole nearly 790 billion units of in-game currency, worth as much as $242,000 if it had been traded in real life. He left a 10-minute video confession.

 The longest anyone's ever survived on the six-star wanted level in GTA IV is Henrik Lindholm, who remained alive and free for 16 minutes and 16 seconds, mainly by staying on foot instead of driving.

 Nintendo had to pay out a large sum to kids who got blisters playing Mario Party.

 Candy Crush works on the parts of the brain that are involved in addiction, releasing a chemical that makes us keep playing.

 In 1982 a take-off of Space Invaders was released called Communist Mutants from Space.

 In 1994's first-person shooter Revolution X you had to rescue Aerosmith from kidnappers in a dystopian future. Later, they appeared in Guitar Hero.

 Art students created the PainStation in 2001, a version of the classic arcade game Pong in which losers could get whipped, shocked or burnt.

 The secret ending in 1997 video game The Lost World: Jurassic Park saw Jeff Goldblum plead with gamers to leave the house, talk to chicks and live their lives. Wonder how that one turned out.

 Reckon you can blitz Halo? Try to beat "slyNki", who according to highspeedhalo.net, got through Halo 4 in one hour, 24 minutes and 12 seconds.

 Grand Theft Auto IV's Statue of Happiness — its version of the Statue of Liberty — has a secret: make it inside and there's a giant, beating heart that no weapon will destroy. Just like the real thing. Oh, that's a secret. Shh.

 In April 2012 some idiot named Shaun Hill set a world record by playing Sing Star for 24 hours and 23 minutes straight.

 In 2012, 90,000 copies of Resident Evil: Revelations were binned because the title was spelled "Revelaitons".

 One game of Animal Crossing on Nintendo's GameCube can last up to 30 years — or the length of a single X Factor episode.

 David Hayter, the screenwriter of the movie X-Men, also did the voice for Solid Snake in the Metal Gear video games.

 Sonic the Hedgehog originally had a human girlfriend named Madonna who was supposed to appear in the first game.

 Lara Croft was originally called Laura Cruz.

 A controller with an overdose of buttons is the Mad Catz Fender Mustang PRO-Guitar developed for Rock Band 3. It has 102 of the buggers.

 The gladiatorial game Shadow of Rome gives you a point bonus for attacking someone who's pissed themselves. It's called "Urine Trouble".

THE WORLD'S HOTTEST ACCOUNTANT

That's what Kierina Tetley will be when she finishes uni

G

'day, Kierina. It's your first time in the mag, so tell us a bit about you and your modelling...

I'm from Perth, I'm 28, and I've appeared in a few international magazines and a calendar. I've got a formal invitation to shoot with Playboy, who gave me a lingerie feature, and they're organising a nude shoot for me. I also do work with boxing and MMA promotions, like a round-card girl.

What about when you're not modelling — what do you get up to?

I'm studying business management at uni, majoring in accounting.

When you tell people that, do they tell you that you look bugger-all like an accountant?

[Laughs] Yes, that always happens.

So, judging by the people in your uni course, is it true accountants are all a bit boring? That they're basically calculators in human form? You being the exception to the rule, obviously.

I think people say that because of the office lifestyle side of accounting, but there's more to it than that. Accounting's very lucrative, you can get exciting clients, and you can create a great lifestyle out of it. I'd like to work for a private accountant to begin with, then use that knowledge to run a successful business, possibly online clothing retail.

You could save a packet and just model all the clothes yourself.

That could be an option!

Are there any accounting students who smash it at the uni bar and nick off to the strip club after class?

There are definitely a few of those in my classes — some real party animals!

Are you one of them?

Maybe a little bit!

How do you relax away from the books and the camera?

I love my watercraft. I've got an 1800cc Yamaha Waverunner, and I use it for fishing. I do a lot of boating — I love yachts, powerboats... I grew up around that sort of thing.

Single? Taken? Or is it too complicated to explain?

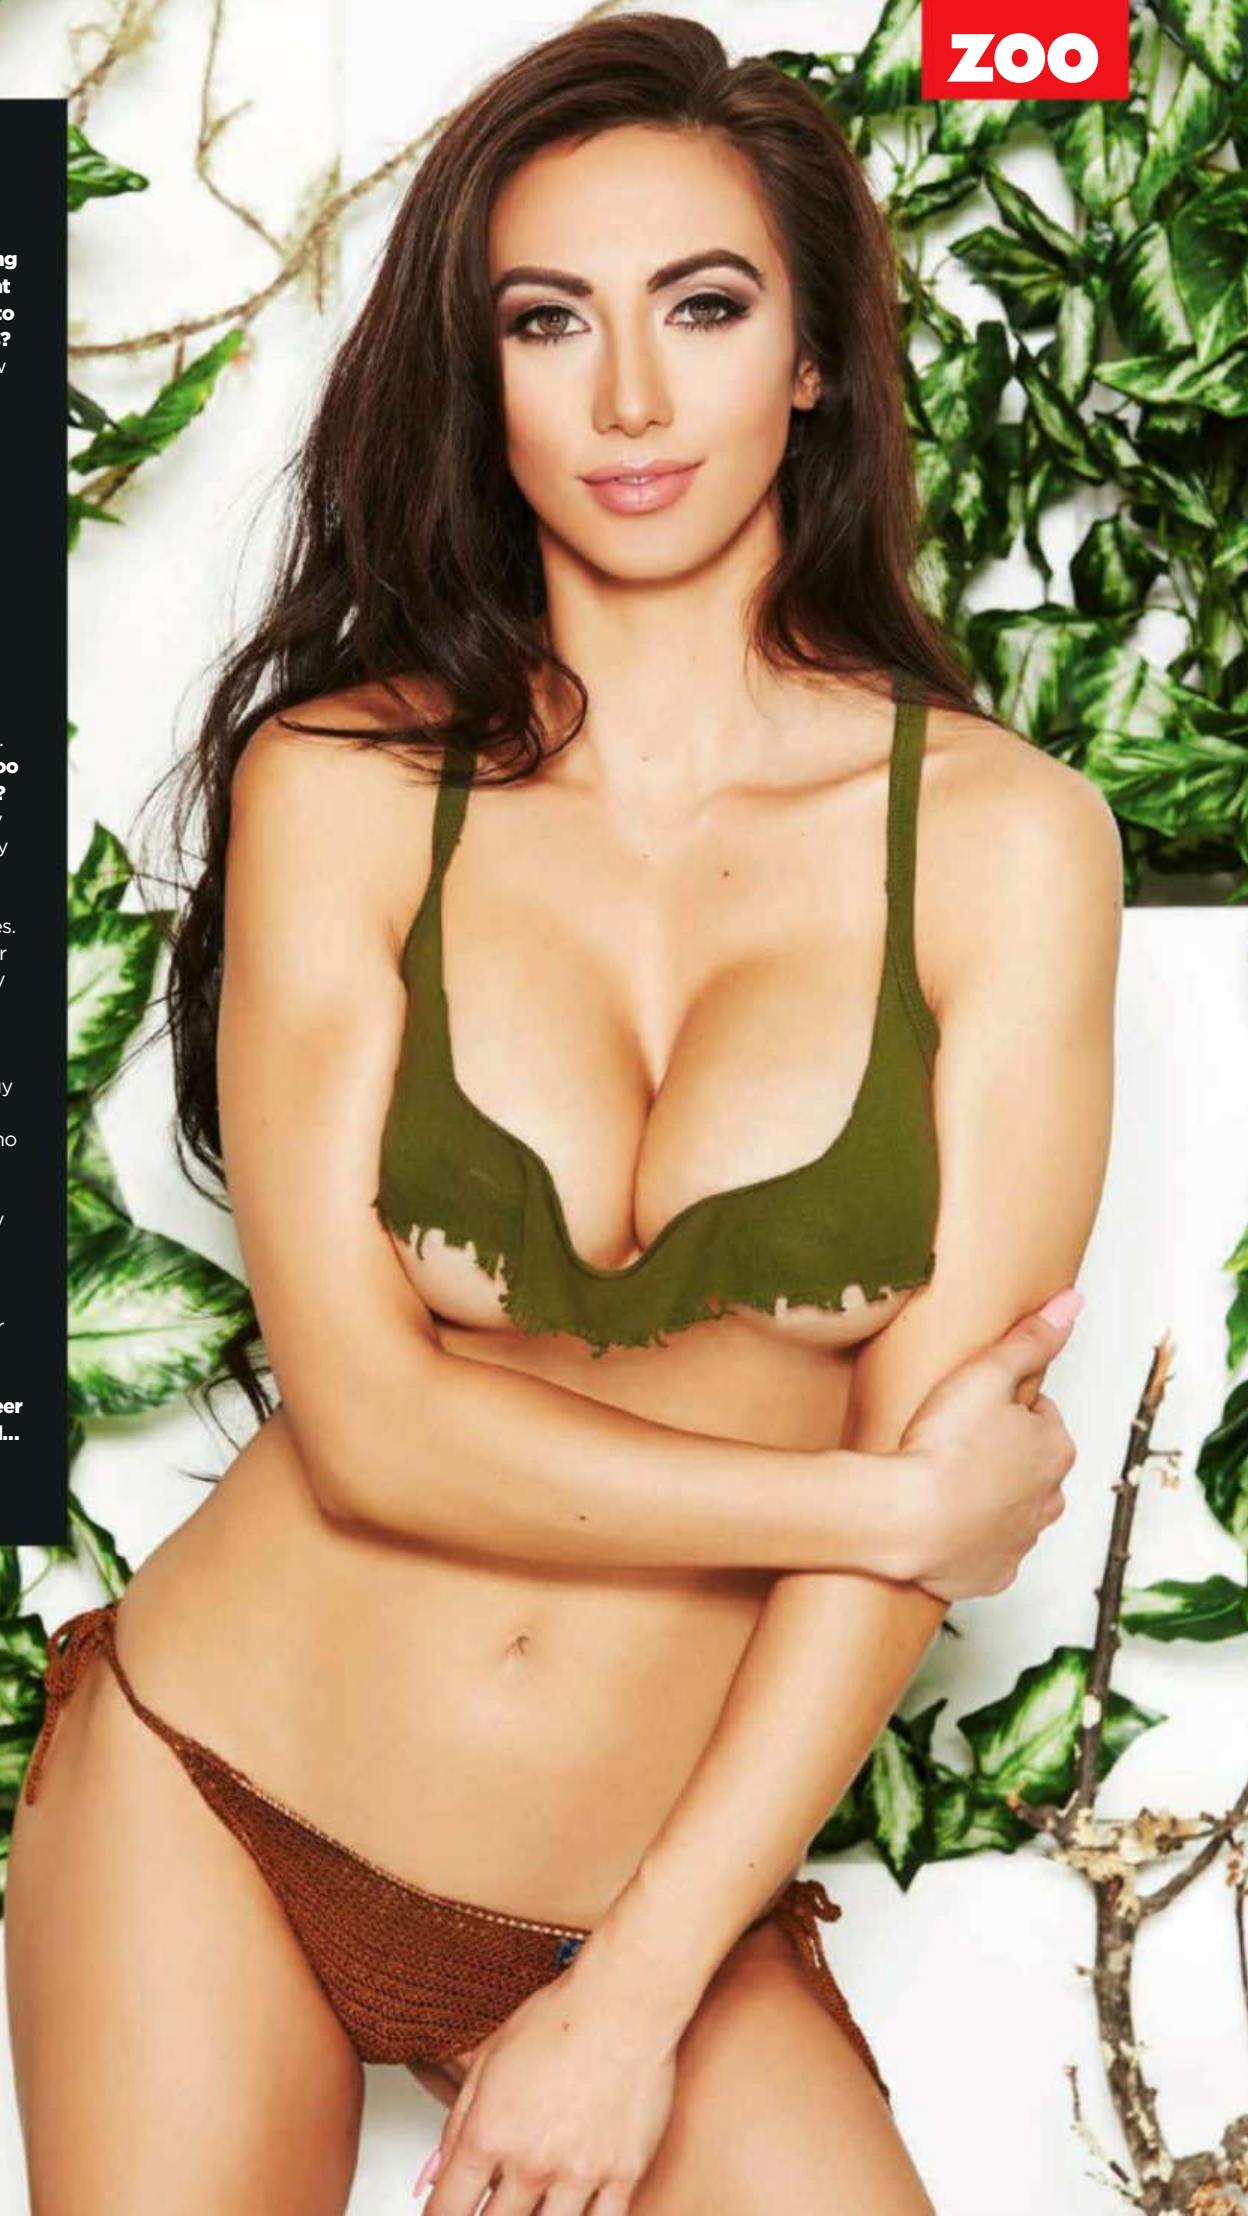

Hmm... I'm finding it very hard to be single. I'm very particular about the guy I'm after. He needs a lot of great, strong attributes. I know what's under a car bonnet, I'm mechanically minded, and I need someone who knows as much or more than me in that area. I like a guy who's in good physical proportion, someone who looks after themselves.

So no beer guts?

No, but sometimes a guy who once had a great body gets a bit out of shape because of long hours at work. You never know the reason.

The guy could own his own pub and he got a beer gut by working too hard...

[Laughs] Exactly!

G

'day,
Leah,
how's
tricks?
Sorry,
I'm sick!

Is it self-inflicted?

[Laughs] I've been drinking a little bit, yeah!

We thought you were on a winery tour, but obviously if you're crook you must be tucked up in bed at home...

I am on the winery tour!

Even on my deathbed I'm still going! Right now I'm in a limo, laid out with a blanket. I've partied my rocks off!

You're in Australia again, thank God. What do you like about the joint so much?

I love the weather! I'm looking forward to the Aussie summer, it's the best bit.

You've been here about six months. Roughly how many times do you reckon you've flashed your boobs in Australia?

Oh God, so many times. I think they just slip out, never mind the flashing!

Met any nice Aussie men since you've been here?

If you mean am I looking for something long-term, no.

"I USED

"I HAD SEX IN THE LONDON UNDERGROUND WHILE THERE WAS CCTV AROUND!"

Short-term, I get a lot of them, but there are a lot of hot Aussie ladies to give me competition, you see. I try to win them over with my accent — it's like Vegemite, you either love it or hate it.

Just your accent, eh?

As if. Leah, let's play a bit of a game. We'll name something outrageous, and you tell us if you've ever done it on a night out.

OK, sure.

Got your boobs out in public?

That's just standard.

Got more than your boobs out in public?

Yes!

Punched a copper?

No, I haven't, actually. Hang on — does during sex count?

Sure does.

Then technically, yes, I have. I arrested and molested him!

Been to a strip club?

I live in strip clubs. I like sticking notes on people's tits.

Been arrested?

No, I haven't. But I was borderline getting arrested once due to an incident with a taxi driver.

Danced on a table?

Standard. I've fallen through a table!

Drunk your body weight in alcohol?

I've done that this week.

Got it on with a chick?

I've done that in the past, but I'm strictly dicky now.

Fallen asleep on a bench?

[Laughs] I did that in a park in England and got woken up by a crashing sound. My best mate had picked up an old TV and smashed it in the middle of the road.

Taken your undies off and lost them?

Yep!

Pashed a guy or girl and forgotten that you did it until someone showed you a photo the day after?

Yep.

Had a fair few drinks followed by some sex in public?

Yeah. That happened in the London Underground with cameras around!

SPORT

The ZOO Footy Awards 2015

We got drunker than Fevola at the Brownlow and handed out our season-ending gongs...

BIGGEST SURPRISE PACKET AWARD

When he was appointed as top-level coach, former Footscray, Demons and Saints player Luke Beveridge looked like a bit of a hard nut, but that didn't mean anyone really thought he could turn around the perennially disappointing Western Bulldogs in a season. Yeah, so about that... And even though they went out early in the finals — a gutsy loss to the Crows — the Bulldogs have been a joy to watch this year, with a hard, competitive edge. Now to build on it...

MOST IMPRESSIVE YOUNG GUN AWARD

He won the Rising Star award for the year, took some wonderful grabs and kicked some special goals — Jesse Hogan of the Demons is living up to the "Great White Hope" label placed on him, particularly in the area of contested marks. Not bad for a bloke who overcame a stress fracture in his back which led to mates nicknaming him "Four-to-Six", as in, "he'll play again in four to six weeks" the previous year.

WHEN WILL HE LEARN AWARD

Freakishly talented, Harley Bennell burnt all his bridges this year at the Suns after a string of disciplinary problems, including being photographed apparently enjoying the 'ol marching powder just as the Karmichael Hunt revelations about drug use among former team-mates emerged. The Suns had understandably had enough. A few Melbourne clubs now appear interested in a young man who, on his night, can be a gamebreaker. But God knows what it'll take to set him on the straight and narrow.

THE NO HAPPY ENDINGS AWARD

Rhyce Shaw was chaired off to mark his final game at fulltime of the Swans' loss to North Melbourne in this year's finals series, but the real news was that his decorated team-mate Adam Goodes had also decided to retire. Appearing burnt out by a gruelling year in which he faced disrespectful booing by opposing crowds in nearly every game he played, Goodes quietly ended a magnificent career in which the repeated sight of him bursting through the midfield and bolting around, through and past defenders to pot another major will be sorely missed.

THE WTF! AWARD

At the start of the season Port were considered one of the top two or three chances to take the flag this year. Then the Power started badly, couldn't win reliably at home, picked up a couple of key injuries and saw a couple of its higher-profile players have mediocre seasons. Result: miss the eight, despite winning more than they lost. Work to do, Mr Hinkley.

SHINE ON AWARD

"Stevie J" Johnson may have been shown the door at the Cats, where he was one of the keys in their dominant flag-winning sides — but his mercurial, touched-by-genius ways will hopefully find another home in 2016, even if he is at the tail end of a sterling career. Feisty, brilliant, infuriating, original and just plain weird sometimes, we'll not see his like again.

DEPENDABLE HAIR AWARD

Essendon finally did what they should have done before his year's suspension and ended the coaching tenure of favoured son and club legend, James Hird. Whatever Hird actually oversaw as coach, it must've been an emotionally wrenching moment for a man who's given his adult life to the Bombers. Thank Christ he has such magnificent hair and a shoo-in career as a Selsun Blue model now this footy palaver is all done.

THE MORE PLOT TWISTS THAN HOME AND AWAY AWARD

Patrick Dangerfield's "will he or won't he" contract saga seems to have had a weekly instalment since the start of the season. He's keen to go back home to Victoria, he's keen to continue with the Crows, he's keen to become the first man on Jupiter... even as ZOO went to print the week before the grand final, it's still not entirely clear where he's playing next year. He might be Prime Minister of Australia or a woman called Patricia by the start of the 2016 season, for all we know.

HOW DOES HE DO THAT? AWARD

Everyone will have their favourite but Crows magician Eddie Betts' left-footed torp from the boundary against Fremantle, which bounced in the square and went through, is the most freakish goal we saw this year. Make that a number of years. "It could've gone anywhere so I'm glad it went through," Betts mused later, like he does that stuff most days.

BIGGEST TRAGEDY

It hardly needs to be said that the death of Adelaide Crows coach Phil Walsh, allegedly at the hands of his own son, cast a large pall over this year's comp for a number of weeks. The way the Adelaide Crows handled the shock of his loss was amazing, and the way they played the rest of the season, making the finals, even more so.

THE SIGH OF RELIEF AWARD

Mick Malthouse, put out of his artful misery in May after Carlton's awful start to the season — thus ending the career of the longest-serving coach in the game — summed up the feelings of plenty of journo when he signed off with: "To the media I wish you well — despite our constant battlefield... you might even miss me! I bear no grudges and I have no regrets..."

THE ROCK AND A HARD PLACE AWARD

The NRL, for banning the shoulder charge. After the tragic death of James Ackerman in the Queensland Cup competition from a legal shoulder charge, the NRL felt obliged to do something and opened up one of their famous grey areas by banning the "tackle". Which sucks, 'cos anyone who truly loves league truly loves big men lining up other big men to iron out with the shoulder. But in a world full of litigation lawyers and 406 camera angles, it just ain't kosher anymore, it would seem.

THE DIDN'T SEE THAT COMING AWARD

To Wests Tigers, for basically showing the door to club captain, 2005 premiership hero and incumbent Blues hooker Robbie Farah. The decision turned into a PR disaster for the Tigers, with coach Jason Taylor asked about it in every subsequent press conference and the club's fans rallying around the team legend. Farah doesn't look like he's going anywhere, with two years remaining on his contract, so the start of the season will be watched very closely to see whether Farah is in the side or running the canteen on the hill at Leichhardt come game day.

THE BACK IN YOUR BOX AWARD

Awarded to the NSW Blues after its stunning one-series "domination" of Queensland was shat on a from a great height by the Maroons during this year's State of Origin series. Normal service was resumed when Queensland won Game Three 52-6, making the Blues' triumph the previous year seem like a brief wet dream. Clearly far more money needs to be spent proving Johnathan Thurston was born in Tweed Heads.

"THAT'S NOT A TRY, THAT'S A MIRACLE!" AWARD

In a so-so season, standard-wise, there were still some amazing tries scored. Heads and shoulders the best, however, was the Warriors' effort against the Storm in Rd 19. Just describing it is hard: Chad Townsend's pinpoint bomb, caught by one of the smallest men on the field in hooker Nathan Friend, who throws it out the back in the midst of doing a backflip over the defence, where it's caught by Sam Tomkins, who passes to Shaun Johnson, who steps back inside, then one-handed flick-passes back to Tomkins. Two more passes to winger Tui Lolohea, who sneaks into the corner to score with millimetres to spare. A modern-day miracle.

MUGSHOTS OF THE YEAR

From a club noted for its discipline under coach Michael Maguire, it was a shock when it emerged at the beginning of the season that star Rabbitoh John Sutton and Luke Burgess had been charged by police after a brawl in an Arizona bar. It later emerged money had legally changed hands to drop the charges against the two, leaving the Rabbitohs holding a baby with the very strong whiff of "cover-up" in its nappy.

THE NO MORE INVESTIGATIONS AWARD

Given to Geoff Toovey after he was dumped as Manly coach, leaving only Des Hasler to say outrageous stuff in post-match press conferences and Craig Bellamy to go loco in the coach's box. Your explosions will be missed, Toovey.

FIND OF THE YEAR AWARD

How do you ever replace Billy Slater? Well, you find a 21-year-old kid from Rockhampton called Cameron Munster, who slips into the custodian role and the Storm game plan like he's been playing there as long as Billy the Kid. Suspensions are further raised that a mad Dr Frankenstein who builds star rugby league players resides in regional Queensland. He was even the Storm's best in the comprehensive finals loss to the Cowboys.

THANKS FOR NOTHING AWARD

Presented to Daly Cherry-Evans by the Gold Coast Titans, a trophy fashioned from a pile of still-wet horse droppings, symbolising what DCE did to the club when he reneged on his deal and stayed at Manly. The decision severely hampered the struggling Titans' ability to recruit both new players and sponsors for next season. Nice one, future superstar. Sadly, what DCE did was within the rules, but if you're ever a chance of going into business with him, don't.

HAIR BY STEFAN AWARD

So, we're not real sure exactly what sort of look Blake Austin was going for at the Raiders this year. Long top, undercut and long goatee. It was kinda urban hipster trying to find his inner Captain Jack Sparrow. His appearance would have made us — had we been an opposing forward — want to smash him into next week. Strangely Austin proved remarkably elusive most of the season. The show-off.

SMARTARSE OF THE YEAR AWARD

West's Tiger Pat Richards was the winner of this category after he awarded his own try during the club's thumping of the Warriors late in the season, thereby rendering on-field referees more useless and redundant than the video ref has already made them. Hocray!

SMALL JOB FOR THE CLEANERS AWARD

The Sharks trophy cabinet. After entering the comp in 1967, the Sharks have yet to release T-shirts with the word "Premiers" on them. They looked like possible contenders this season, on the back of some great performances by emerging young stars like Jack Bird and Valentine Holmes, but again fell short at finals time. "Leave that room, Harry, there's nothing in there."

THE GIST: If you somehow missed the amazing action trilogy from the PS3 era, there's a little piece of your life left unfulfilled. Now all three of Nathan Drake's revolutionary Indiana Jones-like adventures have been remastered for PS4, upgraded to 1080p and 60fps, with better lighting, textures and models. It also includes a new Photo Mode and trophies. ZOO SAYS: The pride of the PS3 era is worth every second of your time, whether you're playing them for the first time or giving them a second run. The first game feels a little dated now, but it's worth every second once you adjust to the handling.

FIGHTING

THE GIST: Squeaky-voiced teenagers from a mix of semi-popular Japanese anime series fight each other in a 2D platformer with plenty of power-ups, combos and pretty flashes on screen.

ZOO SAYS: Why are these kids fighting each other? Who knows, just accept it. If you watch a heavy dose of anime, you may recognise some of these faces and find it worthwhile. Otherwise it's just another head-scratching button-masher. Better played drunk.

THE GIST: Believe it or not, there are three major music games to jam to on the console, with this series the most forgotten title in the land Down Under after distribution issues delayed the release of the first few games. Now it arrives on time for current-gen consoles, along with new plastic instruments, 60 licensed songs, including the likes of Soundgarden, Foo Fighters and Imagine Dragons.

ZOO SAYS: We liked importing the existing 2000 DLC songs from the previous games, and using the previous-gen instruments to save bucks, but of all the music games to play, this feels the least improved.

THE GIST: Balding Boston gangster James "Whitey" Bulger (Johnny Depp) turns federal informant to eradicate the competition and end up with the keys to the underworld. Thanks to FBI connection John Connolly (Joel Edgerton), Bulger and his gang embark on a spectacular, blood-soaked rise to the top of the rackets.

ZOO SAYS: Director Scott Cooper (Crazy Heart) is back to his best after the slight misstep Out of the Furnace. This muscular depiction of gangster life proves he might be the next Martin Scorsese, and it's a welcome return to adult form for the transformed Depp.

3/10

THE GIST: Military contractor Brian Gilcrest (Bradley Cooper) heads to Hawaii to sweet-talk the locals into blessing the opening of a pedestrian gate on behalf of a billionaire (Bill Murray), who wants to develop nearby land into a dodgy private space centre. Annoying Air Force liaison Alison Ng (Emma Stone) joins Brian and the two start shagging. A run-in with his ex (Rachel McAdams), who is now married with kids, gives Brian a raging nostalgia boner.

ZOO SAYS: A love triangle involving a married woman with kids was never going to be romantic. It's not funny, either, despite starring Murray, Alec Baldwin and Danny McBride.

DOCUDRAMA

SOAKED IN BLEACH

[M]

7/10

THE GIST: There are some conspiracy theorists who believe Kurt Cobain's death wasn't a suicide, and this documentary tries to prove that the investigation was botched and that Courtney Love might have been involved in Kurt's murder to get her hands on his cash before he changed his will and filed for divorce.

ZOO SAYS: Told through the eyes of Love's private investigator Tom Grant via audio recordings, footage, re-enactments, and interviews with experts and witnesses, this is yet to get the case reopened, but it might open your eyes and plant the seed of doubt in your head. Love must hate it.

INDIE FOLK

BOY & BEAR LIMIT OF LOVE

SOUNDS LIKE: The five Sydney lads tried something different for their third album. It's the first time singer/guitarist Dave Hosking has shared the songwriting duties with his bandmates. They also recorded the album almost completely live to tape with producer guru Ethan Johns, which gives tracks like Man Alone and Showdown a warm, old-school vibe. As do the little key contributions from Johns.

ZOO SAYS: A consistent and class act, there's plenty to like on here for existing fans, and a ton of potential singles to win over new ones. Even your old man might get into it because there's definitely a '70s folk sound flowing through its veins. The organic feel of the album is refreshing in a world where most of the work is done by computers.

Is he using my head as a mirror again?

FOLK

CITY & COLOUR IF I SHOULD GO BEFORE YOU

SOUNDS LIKE: The former Alexisonfire clean singer continues to moisten the eyes and pants of female fans with his heartfelt acoustic ballads. Sombre songs like Woman and Blood are balanced with fleshed-out rockers such as Wasted Love.

ZOO SAYS: More of the same gold from the Canuck crooner.

9/10

GOthic ROCK

GRAVE PLEASURES DREAM CATCHER

SOUNDS LIKE: After releasing just one amazeballs album, Finland's Beastmilk lost two members and changed their name. Dream Catcher still sounds similar with Kvohst's haunting vocals and short, sinister goth-rock songs.

ZOO SAYS: Recorded by Royal Blood's producer, this sounds like a much leaner, more modern Danzig.

8/10

ACOUSTIC/ROCK

CHRIS CORNELL HIGHER TRUTH

SOUNDS LIKE: After almost ruining his legacy built singing for Soundgarden, Temple of the Dog and Audioslave by releasing 2009's misguided, Timbaland-produced pile of shit Scream, Chris Cornell has wisely returned to the stripped-back acoustic/vocal combo that's proven popular on his solo tours.

ZOO SAYS: Although the 15 tracks wear out their welcome and there's a few songs you'll snooze through, this is a nice stop-gap while we wait for Soundgarden's follow-up to their awesome King Animal comeback. Cornell's unmistakable vocals shine on Worried Moon, Dead Wishes and Nearly Forgot My Broken Heart.

SLUDGE METAL

KYLESA EXHAUSTING FIRE

SOUNDS LIKE: No other band sounds like this three-piece from Georgia, US. Formed on a foundation of sludgy metal riffs, the male/female vocals from guitarists Phillip Cope and Laura Pleasants make every song feel different to the next. Sometimes brutally heavy, other times surprisingly light, their seventh album covers everything from psych through to folk.

ZOO SAYS: Another solid slab from the always consistent Kyleesa. It's only slightly marred by muddy production.

ABOUT...

SNOUTRAGE!

The British Prime Minister has been accused of a sex act with a dead pig's head. Here's the goss...

1 David Cameron is trying to save his bacon after being accused of sticking his pork sword in a dead pig's mouth

2 So who squealed? In an unauthorised bio co-written by a former ally of PM Hameron's, Lord Ashcroft, the authors said they'd been told by an MP the act happened at an initiation for a posh dining club at Oxford University — and there was a photo to prove it!

3 The photo, which may not exist, is nowhere to be found, so this could be hogwash and porkies

4 Despite the lack of proof about the pulled pork, the Poms went absolutely ballistic over it on social media

5 It didn't take long before a fake Twitter account, Cameron's Pig, was set up. "Look, it's embarrassing for me too," they posted, adding, "The whole episode left me with a bad taste in my mouth"

6 The Russian Embassy in London quickly followed Cameron's Pig online. Geopolitics!

7 An episode of UK sci-fi series Black Mirror had a story about a British PM fking a pig on TV to get a hostage freed. Writer Charlie Brooker called it "a complete coincidence, albeit a quite bizarre one"

8 Tory Party sources say the story's not true and the PM was never a club member. Maybe he failed the initiation?
